

Art Design

Rafael Araujo's Architectural Renderings of Life Now as a Coloring Book

APRIL 8, 2016

CHRISTOPHER JOBSON

Architect and illustrator Rafael Araujo drafts beautiful three-dimensional spaces in a studio without technology, connecting himself back to nature while he meticulously demonstrates the Golden Ratio's role in the natural world. In an attempt to pass on this meditative quality about his process and work, Araujo is creating the Golden Ratio Coloring Book. This book is currently on Kickstarter along with video documentation of Araujo's process, which he has been fine-tuning for the last 40 years.

"I was 15 when I started noticing intelligent patterns in the world of nature—spirals, sequences, proportions," said Araujo. "This secret of nature's beautiful designs unfolded before my very eyes. Everything I draw is by hand. I don't use a computer, just a pencil, compass, and a protractor."

Araujo's prints are also available in the Colossal Shop.

